Moneyline bets are the easiest of all: You only need to choose who you think will win the game.

Here's an example of a standard NBA moneyline:

5 (-110)

On the flip side, Brooklyn doesn't have to win in order for your Nets bet to cash; you are also successful if they lose by one.

Study which teams are playing well, which ones are on short rest vs.

Props bets cover an incredibly wide range of outcomes, including which player will score the first basket, which team will be the first to score 20 points, which player will record the most assists, which quarter will feature the most points, and literally hundreds more for most games.

The best approach to team prop bets is to study the matchup similar to how you would for a standard bet, and lean into outcomes you feel most confident in based on that research.

It's one thing to get all of your NBA bets in before the games start.
