Large numbers of five-star reviews are a key element in boosting a product's rankings on Amazon's and Google websites. Misleading reviews are there a massive e-commerce problem, most notably for Amazon.

The CMA said it will now "gather further information to determine whether these two firms may have broken consumer law by taking insufficient action to protect shoppers from fake reviews."

The CMA investigation opened in May 2020, and assessed several platforms' internal systems and processes for identifying and dealing with fake reviews.

Enforcement action

"Our worry is that millions of online shoppers could be misled by reading fake reviews and then spending their money based on those recommendations," said Andrea Coscelli, the CMA's chief executive.

This could range from securing formal commitments from the firms to change the way they deal with fake reviews or escalating to court action if needed.
