As can be seen from the above, government officials and lawmakers are taking a position that a player gambling online through the internet by using his or her computer at his or her home will be interpreted to have engaged in illegal gambling, and while this statement focuses on the part of the user side of things (and) Tj T* BT /

the Japanese judicial side, at least the government side is showing its intention of taking a stricter attitude against offshore gambling in general.

3 million yen in covid-19 relief funds by the town he resided in refused the town's request to return the money by claiming that he had gambled the money away on online gambling sites, drawing media attention and outrage nationwide.

Subsequently, on 27 July 2018 the Japanese Diet passed the Act, which legalised gambling to be operated by licensed private entities in certain designated locations within Japan.

While the Act is silent on the actual limitation on the size of casinos, as this has been relegated to the Enforcement Order (Article 41 of the Act), the Enforcement Order that was issued in March 2019 limited the gross floor area for a casino in IR facilities to 3 per cent or less.
