The Consequences Of Selling Fakes On eBay

Removal of Listings and Products

If eBay judges you to be a "risky" seller they may decide to play it safe and remove all of your listings.

Even if eBay doesn't remove all of your listings it's highly likely that they will lower your selling limits and restrict your account which can entirely stymie your business' growth.

Refunds and chargebacks from customers are common consequences of selling fake products online.

eBay will typically fight charge-back cases on behalf of sellers but, if they decide that you were selling fakes, they'll refund the buyer and charge it to your account.

The best way to protect yourself is to learn how to recognize fakes so you can avoid common dupes.

At the end of the day, selling fakes on eBay simply isn't worth risking your account for. There are people that "get away with it" for a period of time but the consequences are severe enough that you're risking your entire future livelihood for a quick buck.
